

HIGH RISK ENVIRONMENT TRAINING FOR JOURNALISTS AND REPORTERS

The 21st Century World is a dangerous place: Wars, low-intensity conflicts, Genocides, Lawlessness, Revolutions, Counter-Insurgencies, etc., all of which situations that still require in-depth coverage and reporting.

IEDs targeting journalists - Iraq

Harassment of the Press - Afghanistan

Due to the nature of their work, journalists and reporters, freelancers as well as syndicated, are often tasked with the impossible mission of going, unarmed and for an undetermined duration, to High-Risk Environments deadly even to Tier One Military Personnel.

As a result, members of the Press are often persecuted, abducted, tortured, and even assassinated by the very actors of the conflict they were sent to cover.

Senshido enables newsmen with the tools needed to extricate themselves from perilous situations and complete their assignments by thoroughly integrating Situational Awareness, verbal skills, repositioning strategies, and unarmed tactics, while employing a discriminate use of force, as well as a certain amount of discretion.

Senshido offers:

- ♦ Realistic and Efficient: Our methodology is based on replicating actual situations and having journalists and reporters go through “Full-Speed-Full-Out” Force-on-Force scenarios, focusing on the use of gross-motor skillsets and improvisation under stress. If it doesn’t work under extreme conditions, we don’t teach it as it won’t work in real life.
- ♦ Time and Cost effective: Our simplified approach to surviving violence means that newsmen can become proficient in record time and at very affordable rates.
- ♦ Customizable to a wide variety of situations and environments: What we teach is fully adaptable as well as transferable from one sector of activity to another, across the risk spectrum (Low-Medium-Moderate-High-Extreme) with minimal preparation and retraining.
